

Abstract

In one implementation of the present invention, a securement structure (e.g., one or more clamps) is integrated to a concrete element. The securement structure secures the concrete element to a steel element. The concrete element serves as a leave-in-place 5 screed so as to apply concrete to the steel element to protect the steel element from fire.